Medicinal marijuana is industrial, not farming

By Bill Rea

The production of medicinal marijuana is going to be considered an industrial land use, as opposed to agricultural.

Caledon council came to that conclusion last week after a lengthy discussion, complete with a couple of delegations and urgings that it be treated as an agricultural product.

The staff recommendation to council included provisions for establishing such operations in other areas with a site-specific rezoning.

Brandon Ward, senior development planner with the Town, told councillors the position of staff has been that facilities for growing this substance should be in areas zoned for prestige and serviced industrial, where services are in place.

That would include provisions for 150-metre separations from sensitive land uses, prohibitions of on advertising and outdoor storage, and making sure loading and delivery areas are out of public view.

Health Canada has issued 13 licences for medicinal marijuana production facilities, and four of those are in Ontario, and two other applications are in an advanced stage of review, including a proposal for a 300,000 square-foot industrial facility in Brampton.

One of the licences that has been issued is for a facility in Clearview Township. Ward stated it's a 10,000 square-foot facility that's in the process of expanding to 60,000 square feet. It's protected by a three-metre razor-wire fence and about 70 uses in agricultural or rural zones, while places like Brampton and Windsor allow them in industrial areas.

It's important to consider the growing of marijuana as part of a whole operation, including drying, processing, packaging and distribution. Ward stated that's the way all pharmaceutical products are handled. He also pointed out it's a controlled substance, unlike other medicinal plants, so

Chase The Dream goes Sunday

By Bill Rea

Terra Cotta is going to be a very busy place this coming Sunday (Aug. 24). The 3rd annual Chase The Dream motorcycle show and fundraiser will be taking place at Terra Cotta Inn. The day will include a scenic ride through the Caledon Hills, followed by an afternoon of live entertainment at the Inn.

The event is in support of Chase Galea, a local young man who has cerebral palsy and hearing loss. He's now seven and the funds raised from the event will go toward trust fund that's been set up to provide him with a better life.

Organizer Dave Heydon said things are looking good for the coming event.

"Just pray for good weather," Heydon said registration is at 9:30 a.m. at the Inn at 175 King St., with "kickstands up at 11."

The ride will take about 90 minutes, and the rest of the afternoon will include a "show and shine," with prizes in different categories, live music by Larry Melton, raffles for major prizes, silent and live auction, and much more.

Even people who are not motorcycle enthusiasts should be impressed with the collection of bikes that will be on display.

Tickets are $20, and Heydon said this includes admission to the event and a free raffle ticket for a draw $2,000 gift card.

Talk at Jobs Caledon next week on broadcast journalism career

Jobs Caledon will host a career talk about the broadcast journalism field next Thursday (Aug. 28) from 2:30 to 4 p.m.

It will be presented by Anthem Media Group (AMG)'s on-air personality John Ramdeen and Senior Editor Derek Swanton from network channel, Fight Network.

Ramdeen and Swanton will discuss their typical days and include an overview on how a news story is first conceived to how it ends up on air for viewers to watch. They will talk about how technology has changed how broadcast journalism is delivered to viewers, and the skills and education required to work within this dynamic profession.

AMG is a global media platform which has acquired many sport-related programs to meet their target audiences. AMG acquired Fight Network in 2011. Currently, Fight Network is the only Canadian 24-hour combat sports station, and has recently branched out to include new on-air programs. One is Fight+Music, where musicians are interviewed about combat sports and its relationship to music. Another new program is The Shift, which discusses fight-related movies and video games, and recently included travelling to California for the 2014 San Diego Comic-Con.

Ramdeen has been working in the media industry for more than 10 years and currently hosts Fight Network's original program, 5 Rounds. Being knowledgeable about every aspect of broadcast journalism is an asset in the business, including volunteer work. "I began as an unpaid intern and worked my way up the ladder over the years to eventually end up in the role of host/reporter," he said.

Swanton has been working at Fight Network for more than four years as a senior editor, producer and camera operator. More recently, he has been producing and interviewing various musicians for Fight+Music.

"If you love TV and would like to do more than watch, come and check out our presentation," he said.

Take part in this exciting seminar, phone Jobs Caledon at 905-584-2300, ext. 200, or email jobs@ccs4u.org

The presentation will be at Jobs Caledon, which is based out of Caledon Community Services at 18 King St. East in the Royal Courtyards in Bolton.

Three pools in Brampton positive for WNV

Peel Public Health reports three pools in Brampton tested positive for West Nile Virus (WNV) last week.

That brings to four the number found so far this year in Peel Region. The other was earlier in the year in Mississauga. There have been no human cases of the illness reported this year in Peel, although there's been one probable case in the area of the Simcoe/Muskoka District Health Unit.

The adult mosquito surveillance program started June 16. Adult mosquitoes are to be collected weekly from traps at 31 fixed locations throughout the region until late September. To date, 369 mosquito batches have been tested, with the four positive results.

Health officials received six stagnant water reports from Peel residents last week.

The larviciding program started June 2 and will continue until Sept. 30. Larviciding involves applying environmentally friendly products to reduce mosquito larvae living in stagnant water. The products are applied to municipal catch basins and selected sites on public property.

The third and final round of roadside catch basin larviciding began Aug. 11. The third round is indicated by a pink dot on the catch basin grate. It takes approximately three weeks to complete a round of larviciding.

Larviciding of catch basins in the green spaces of parks in Peel is complete. The treatment of surface water sites on public lands is ongoing.

The Region has a number of tips to reduce the risk of being infected with WNV.

They include removing stagnant water on properties. Empty or dispose of containers that can hold water, such as old tires, wheelbarrows, barrels, pails, toys and recycling bins; and turn over wading pools, remove water that collects on pool covers and make sure the pool's pump is circulating

To avoid being bitten by mosquitoes, wear light-coloured clothing, including long sleeves, long pants, socks and a hat if going outdoors, even if it's just out to the backyard, especially at dusk or dawn. Use an insect repellent and apply it according to the manufacturer's directions.

Richmond Hill man facing several charges after Aug. 11 incident

A 35-year-old man from Richmond Hill faces a number of charges after a Caledon OPP officer's attention was attracted in a Aug. 11 incident.

Police report the officer was driving along Regional Road 50 in Bolton, and was forced to take evasive action to avoid a collision with a 1997 silver Volvo that was backing out of a driveway.

The officer observed the Volvo heading south, initiated a traffic stop and learned the driver was suspended from driving for unpaid fines. After the officer served the driver with his documents he stepped out of his vehicle and became irate, refusing to allow the tow truck operator to tow his vehicle. The driver returned to his vehicle and attempted to leave the scene, refusing to comply with the officer's demands.

The officer and the tow truck operator strategically placed their vehicles in order to prevent the driver from fleeing in his car.

The driver eventually complied with the demands and was arrested. A search of the accused resulted finding of a quantity of drugs, believed to be marijuana.

The man was charged with dangerous operation of a motor vehicle, obstructing a peace officer and possession of a Schedule II substance, as well as driving while under suspension.

Lots of good work done in Youth Leadership Camp

Caledon OPP recently hosted its annual Youth Leadership Camp, enabling local youth people to spend a week with officers, getting an idea of what police life is like, while performing various projects in the community. Inspector Tim Melanson, detachment commander, welcomed the group the first day, with suggestions they might want to consider a career in law enforcement. "It's been a great career, he told them. Among the projects the Camp participants took part in was a car wash in the Bolton Home Depot parking lot. Elizabeth Wizniak of Orangeville and Jordan Tishler of Caledon were working on the shine on this car. Proceeds from the wash will go toward the Shop With a Cop Christmas fundraiser. The Campers were put to work cleaning up graffiti in certain places. These folks were working under Highway 410.

Arguments raised that growing marijuana is like any crop

the production facility must be under tight security.

Ward also pointed out these facilities are not considered agricultural-related uses under the Provincial Policy Statement (PPS), which was updated this year.

Allowing operations in rural areas could result in visual impacts on the landscape, more demands on rural infrastructure (roads, hydro, etc.) and water and wastewater requirements. There would also be concerns over impacts from noise or smells. Ward said these could be addressed through rezonings and site plan controls.

Ward also concluded these facilities don't need rural locations, since they don't need native soils or large parcels of land.

Councillor Richard Paterak observed the federal regulations seem to allow production facilities in strip malls in industrial areas. He thought the feds would come to regret that, wondering if a facility could be in a free-standing unit.

Ward told Councillor Doug Beffort there are no provisions to produce anything but a tobacco-like product, meaning manufacturing marijuana in a pill form would not be allowed. The product has to be dried and packaged in a certain way.

Councillor Nick deBoer pointed out the actual growing area will take up most of the room in the facility, adding that is the case in most agricultural operations.

Paterak was concerned about allowing industrial zonings in rural areas, pointing out that could open the door to another type of industrial use moving in later.

"I have a concern there," he said.

Lawyer Ron Webb, representing Cannabis Care Canada Inc., put forth a case for an operation being proposed on 15 acres on Highway 10, north of Caledon village.

He told councillors the site contains a 16,000 square-foot building that would be used for production. Only a small portion of the building would be used for anything other than growing. There will be an office, which he said has nothing to do with the processing of what he called an agricultural product.

Webb stressed this would be similar to growing tobacco or mushrooms, since it is an agricultural function. He also pointed out the site is isolated, on a highway, surrounded by forest, adding there's no chance of there being adverse impacts on neighbours.

The big issue, Webb argued, is with zoning. He said it's in a rural zone, meaning a farm is permitted. And he cited the Town's bylaws as defining a farm as a land use for growing food, tobacco or other crops.

Webb agreed staff has a different opinion on what should be permitted.

"You alone have the power to decide what the interpretation is," he told councillors, adding his interpretation is this would be a good site for such and operation and that it's a permitted use.

"Growing a crop, whether it's a seed or a bulb, is still growing a crop," declared Leah Emms, representing the Ontario Federation of Agriculture.

She added grain is grown, dried, stored and shipped off farms, arguing it's no different than growing marijuana.

As well, Emms pointed out brewing is a regulated activity, but it's still allowed on agricultural lands.

Security issues are addressed in the Health Canada regulations, she observed, adding lots of farms have their own security systems these days.

Water uses shouldn't be an issue on agricultural lands, since any crop or livestock production uses water.

Emms was also concerned about limiting farmers' ability to diversify on their own lands.

Ward told Councillor Rob Mezzapelli the Town has more controls with requiring rezonings. Treating growing operations like an as-of-right use in agricultural areas would mean the Town would have site plan control. Ward pointed out there is no public process for dealing with site plans, adding the controls might not even apply to agricultural operations.

He also said the people behind the proposals would need a licence, but that's issued by the feds, with the Town only being notified.

Mezzapelli said he was inclined to support allowing them in agricultural areas, but he was concerned about possible expansion and possible fire issues, especially if a couple of hundred people are working in a rural area.

Councillor Richard Whitehead thought these operations should be in industrial areas, with limited opportunities for them to go in rural areas. But how to deal with such applications, he said, requires more discussion. He also said that reference to rural areas should exclude villages, hamlets and rural estate areas. He said there are lots of rural lands that aren't farms.

Whitehead also stressed the need to beware of putting large operations like this, with many employees, on low-usage rural roads.

Councillor Allan Thompson thought the rezoning process for agricultural lands was not the way to go. He said that would mean a long process involving more than the Town.

Director of Development Approval and Planning Policy Mary Hall said the advantage with rezonings is they involve a public process and can be appealed. Neither is the case when it comes to site plans. She added there is no requirement to notify neighbours about site plans.

Paterak said he was not in favour of site-specific zonings. He wondered what would happen if the operation went out of business, and if the land would revert back to agricultural. He said there have to be provisions for subsequent uses.

He suggested site plan control in these cases be taken away from staff and given to council. But a proposed amendment to the motion calling for that was defeated on a tie vote.

He added there are a lot of business people who think marijuana will be legalized soon, so they want to get their feet wet and get into the business through medicinal marijuana.

Beffort observed when the Town approves cellular towers, there's an agreement that if it's no longer needed, it's removed. Hall told him that's Industry Canada rules. She added she's never heard of a case of a building being constructed legally not being allowed to change its use. Renovating the building, she said, is more of a legal issue than planning.

"We're creating red tape here, and I don't think we're helping an industry," Thompson commented.

Whitehead replied it's through zoning that there's public process.

Mayor Marolyn Morrison agreed with the need for a public process. She added few councils in her experience go against what the majority of residents want.

Jennifer Innis is vying for another position at Town Hall, like Councillor

By Bill Rea

Jennifer Innis has spent years watching municipal affairs from within Caledon Town Hall.

Now she wants to get more involved. Innis made it official earlier this month that she will be seeking election to Caledon and Peel Regional council this fall. She will be running for the Regional seat for Wards 3 and 4, which takes in Caledon East and much of the former Township of Albion.

This is the first time Innis has sought political office. She said she had been approached by people in the community to think about it.

"I feel like it's sort of the right time for me and my family and the community," she said, adding she thinks it's time for some fresh perspectives at the council table. "I think it's time the demographics at council match the demographics of our community."

And she said she's not worried about going for the Regional seat her first time out.

"I feel you can make more of a difference at the Regional level," she remarked.

Innis has worked for the Town for more than 10 years, and was executive assistant to the mayor.

"It's not like I'm completely new to the situation," she commented.

The married mother of two daughters was speaking confidently about her chances for election.

"I've had really, really positive receptions in the community," she said. "I'm very optimistic about it."

De Rose seeking seat on Dufferin-Peel Board

By Bill Rea

Krystina De Rose believes a younger voice is needed on the Dufferin-Peel District Catholic School Board.

The Bolton resident has announced she will be seeking to represent Caledon and Dufferin County on the board after the October municipal elections.

This will be her first venture into the political arena, but she has been close to the action. She works at Queen's park as a legislative assistant to Simcoe North MPP Garfield Dunlop.

"I figured I'd want to be involved in Dufferin-Caledon, and I figured this would be a great way to do that," she said.

De Rose added she believes that as a trustee, she can bring a younger perspective to the board table. She added Catholic education is changing, and the board needs to follow that evolution.

De Rose was talking confidently about her chances of election.

"I think they're good," she said. "I'm going to work hard. I'm no stranger to hard work."

Seniors and low-income households get help with repairs and renovations

Peel Region is now accepting applications for Peel Renovates, a program that provides eligible seniors and low-income households with one-time assistance of up to $15,000 per household for major home repairs and accessibility renovations.

Eligible applicants must have a household annual gross income of less than $60,000 and reside in Peel. Eligible homes in Caledon must have an assessed value of less than $525,501. Applicants have to want to undertake renovations and/or repairs that are related to structural, electrical, plumbing, heating, fire safety or accessibility.

Residents can apply by telephone by calling 905-793-9200. The application process may take up to 45 minutes to complete.

Complete applications will require address and most recent Municipal Property Assessment Corporation (MPAC) property assessment notice; the names and dates of birth of all family members within the household; immigration status for all family members; income, assets and tax returns for all family members; and expenses (child care, disability related work expenses, etc.).

CBC should be ashamed

The left-wing political bias of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation (CBC) is one of the worst-kept secrets in this country. Thus it's hard to be surprised that CBC would have broadcast the 2013 movie Jack Sunday night. The movie was about the late Jack Layton, who was the leader of the federal New Democratic Party during the last election. As we have stated in this space before, we believe a lot of you would have experimented with how the words "Prime Minister Layton" rolled of the tongue as that memorable campaign came to a close. The movie delved into some detail about that election campaign, during which Layton spent the bulk of his time walking with the aid of a cane, owing to hip surgery that had taken place shortly before the election writ was dropped. That was after a battle with prostrate cancer. But there was also a lot of attention paid to the very close and loving relationship between Layton and Olivia Chow. He married Chow in 1988, and the two worked as a political team for many years. Layton, alas, died in 2011 (we're coming up on the anniversary of his passing), and Chow now just happens to be running to be mayor of Toronto.

We could probably never have given a man like Layton our editorial endorsement. But as all Canadians should, we respected the man for his devotion to causes that were dear to so many of the people in our country, and for his sincerity to said causes.

The movie was a worthy tribute to a man and his values. The timing of the showing of the movie, however, stunk the joint out.

Chow is currently in the middle of a hotly contested campaign for the proverbial "brass ring" of Toronto politics. There are many other people seeking that same office. Four very worthy front-runners are in that group with her, including the incumbent.

We would expect people involved with those other four campaigns (all of the other campaigns, for that matter) would have been very angry that CBC would have chosen to present a movie focusing on just one candidate so close to the election.

Is CBC planning to air comparable pieces about Rob Ford or John Tory? We doubt it.

Olivia Chow is certainly a worthy candidate for mayor of the megacity to the south, with lots of political experience in both the municipal and federal trenches. And if CBC believes it has the need to endorse her candidacy, then let Canada's public broadcasting outlet be up front about it. They have no shortage of editorial commentators who can give her all the plugs they want.

But the free plug she received Sunday night was going too far. If Chow is to be the next mayor, let her get to that office on her merits, not on who her late husband was.

Midnight Madness was great

I would like to provide some feedback about the Midnight Madness to pass along to the organizers.

I was unable to go to the Madness until approximately 8 p.m. Friday. I wish I could have gone earlier and spent more time there. I loved the music. While I was there, I heard Liam Titcomb and Melanie Durrant. The two of them are astoundingly talented (as evident by their collective musical and acting careers and past Juno nomination/performance) and we could not be more fortunate to have them performing for us Friday night. As I enjoy listening to Liam's CD (I would have purchased Melanie's too if she had some with her), I reflect on how I couldn't stay in my seat; I just had to get up and move when I was hearing their magical music. I am just sorry I was not able to stay and listen to all of the performers. Based on the calibre of the two musicians I saw, I am sure they were incredible.

My point really is that Friday night we were treated to a great event where family, friends and the community could gather, have fun and get exposed to our businesses with some great deals. If that wasn't enough, we were also treated to world class talent right here in Bolton. I appreciated it so much.

Thank you to the BIA and to those people that make all that effort and contribute the funds to make Midnight Madness a possibility. Thank you so very much!

Why are gas prices so high?

I purchased a new car a couple of months ago, and the gas tank was filled for me. Since then, I have not purchased gas in Caledon, at all. I wait until I visit my son or daughter in Orangeville, or when I am in Brampton. The reason of course is, that gas is usually at least five cents a litre cheaper in Caledon's surrounding communities.

Today I am waiting to gas up when I drive to a friend's cottage in Orillia. I'm sure other drivers living in Caledon do the same thing, therefore the question has to be, why are gas prices in Caledon higher than in both Brampton and Orangeville? Could it be that maybe Caledon residents are being gouged? I wonder.

As well, my husband and I drive to Manitoba each summer and gas prices there are consistently cheaper than in Ontario. Go figure.

We always gas up just before entering Ontario, and gas up upon arrival in Manitoba. The question is, why are Ontario residents paying more for gas than in Manitoba? I wonder.

It happened today

It's hard to believe, but there was a time about 50 years ago when it seemed the Stanley Cup was won by either the Toronto Maple Leafs or the Montreal Canadiens.

The legendary coach of the Habs in those days was Hector "Toe" Blake.

Toe Blake was born this day, Aug. 21, 1912.

Vacation blues

One of the many frustrating things about life is the way that things to which we look forward seem to take their own sweet time coming, and then seem to be over just like that.

Don't you find that vacations are a lot like that?

I ought to know, as I spent last week doing nothing, like you're supposed to when on vacation, with a couple of exceptions. My wife and I spent part of the time away north of here, so we were able to eat quite well, get in some swimming, went out for a quick paddle in a kayak built for two (I think that was a first for Beth) and generally tried to spend our time doing as little as possible. We got in some reading, and I spent a couple of days up there trying to get caught up on the household books. I made some progress, but there's still a lot to be done. Oh yeah, I also worked.

Caledon council met last Tuesday. It would have been possible to get a colleague to cover for me for part of the meeting, but the truth is the timelines just weren't going to work, so I worked.

We were up bright and early that morning, hopped in the car, stopped for coffee in Barrie, arriving in the council tables in plenty of time for the closed session to start, and it went on for the better part of an hour. Beth was with me. She didn't want to stay up north all by herself for the day. Besides, we had taken her car on the trip north, so I didn't have the authority to tell her she couldn't come. Even if I had the authority, there's no way she would have let me exercise it.

Beth had a few errands to run, which included checking that all was well with our house in our absence (a major impediment to my relaxing when I'm away from home is worrying about what's going on at home when I'm not around).

Besides, the rain came down in buckets that day, which would have ruled out any outdoor activities. It was even too wet to go swimming.

The meeting went a little longer than I had anticipated, which just demonstrates that my skills at timing things is about as good as my ability to predict election results.

During the day, and in the days that have followed, Beth has received lots of accolades. Not much for the guy who worked on his vacation time.

Don't worry. I knew what I was getting into.

Don't worry too much about Beth either. She did marry me, but she had a pretty good idea what she was getting into as well.

Welcome to inflation

The vacation time that I have just devoted the last several paragraphs describing in mindless detail included a weekend at home.

You married men reading this will appreciate what I'm about to describe, as Beth handed me a banker's box and a recycling bag, and directed me to bring some order to the disordered chaos that was one of the upstairs rooms. It's mainly been used as a dumping ground for paper, mostly of a financial nature, for several years. Demands of work forced me to let certain bookkeeping chores slide for a number of years. That was the explanation for the work on the household books I was doing up north, during the days I wasn't covering council (with Beth's permission, of course).

So, brandishing the banker's box and recycling bag, I went upstairs to do as I was bid (after 16 years of marital bliss, I can assure you that I have learned my place).

The amazing thing about paper, especially the stuff you've let pile up for a couple of years, is just what you're going to uncover. And one of the great problems in that situation, if the piece of paper contains writing, you are obliged to read it, hoping that gives some clue as to why you kept it. And sometimes it doesn't.

But one thing I came upon was a Visa statement, dated Aug. 5, 1997. How the hell that stayed out of the shredder I'll never understand. But the trip down Memory Lane that it represented was, to say the least, intriguing. To say the most, I would simply ask how many of you could get nostalgic over a 17-year-old Visa statement?

Oh by the way, in keeping with the practice I have followed since I started packing plastic, that bill was paid in full and on time.

The bill was for $1,328.89. And before any of you shrug that off, I should mention that it covered all of the expenses for my vacation that year. I should also point out that in those days, my holidays, when I actually travelled anywhere, was usually for four or five days, and took me to a place I could get to by car. And in those days, I was not in the habit of sneaking back to work to cover council meetings (but I wasn't working in Caledon in those days).

I remember that holiday well. It was a little more than a month after Beth and I became engaged, and we actually started serious wedding planning on the balcony of our room at the Ameri-Can resort in Niagara Falls (that's where we set the date).

The whole tab for the four-day holiday for two, according to my Visa statement at the time, came to $795.82. That includes accommodation and meals, including dinner atop the Skylon the first night we were there (at almost $100, with no appetizers or desert, and me having a beer, I remember thinking it was damned expensive). And I have not factored in gas. We took Beth's car because she had air conditioning in those days (I was far too cheap for that). But I'm sure I would have been enough of a sport to have put the gas for Beth's car during the trip on my Visa, had the need to gas up reared its head (according to the dates on the Visa statement, it didn't).

But remember, I was enough of a sport to take my beloved wife to a Caledon council meeting during our vacation last week.

And while we're on the topic of gas, the Visa bill of which I have been writing about had five such charges. In those days, I drove a Geo Metro, which was about the best you could have done in terms of fuel efficiency. I'm in the habit (probably a bad one) of letting the tank in my car get very close to empty before getting gas.

Thus, when I gas-up, I usually get a full tank. And if memory serves, it took a little more than 30 litres to fill the Geo-Metro's tank.

Get ready to yearn for the good old days! During the period covered by the Visa statement we've been dealing with, I got gas five times, and the highest amount I paid for 30 some-odd litres was $16.02. When was the last time a sum of money like that filled your gas tank? Have I ruined your day yet?

And for you older folks interested in nostalgia, the statement indicates I laid out $15.51 for something at Eaton's. I have no idea what that would have been, and I can't contact Eaton's to find out.

Don't you wish you could still shop at Eaton's or get a tank of gas for less than $20?

I wish I was still on vacation.

Measurement Canada making sure you get what you pay for

Canadians make countless purchases that involve measurement of the goods they're buying — whether it's gas for our cars or food for our families.

We should be able to depend on the accuracy of those measurements, so we get what we pay for. Consumers should always be able to have confidence that what they pay reflects the advertised price and the actual quantity they purchase.

This is why our government introduced and passed the Fairness at the Pumps Act, which came into force Aug. 1.

Our legislation imposes fines for those who, through carelessness or ill intent, sell inaccurately measured goods. To deter this behavior and give consumers

OTTAWA JOURNAL

David Tilson
MP Dufferin-Caledon

confidence, these fines are significant — up to $10,000 for minor offences, up to $25,000 for major offences, and up to $50,000 for repeat offences.

The Act also establishes regular inspections of gas pumps, retail food scales and other devices to promote accountability. Measurement Canada will maintain oversight of inspections, undertaking follow-up inspections, on-site audits and enforcement when necessary.

This addresses a potentially serious situation. Government studies found that up to six per cent of the time, gas pumps do not accurately reflect the advertised price — and the retailer benefits two thirds of the time. By holding retailers accountable, careless behaviour and malicious intent will both be deterred.

Whether you're driving to work or setting out on a family vacation, fairness at the pumps will help make it a little more affordable. Furthermore, fair measurements in the store will help with grocery bills and everyday living.

Our government will continue to stand up for hard-working Canadian families and for all consumers. Fairness, at the pump, the deli counter, and anywhere we spend our hard-earned money, is not too much to ask. We're delivering on our commitment to put consumers first.

Two Bolton Scouts get Duke of Edinburgh's Awards

By Bill Rea

The Scouting movement in Bolton continues to make its mark in the Duke of Edinburgh's Award program.

Palgrave resident Alexander Court and Harry Hautot of Bolton, both members of the 1st Bolton Scout Group, were presented with their Gold Awards of Achievement recently. They were among about 100 young people receiving the award from Gov. Gen. David Johnson. They were accompanied by Scout Leaders Karen Matson and Steve Vickers who counselled them during the program.

Hautot's community services have included his volunteering as an assistant Beaver leader, church volunteer, youth network team member and a trail volunteer. Court has been a youth trainer, event coordinator, area and council youth commissioner, training course leader, etc. as part of his activities with the Scouts.

The program also required the two to take part in an adventurous journey, which was a five-day canoe trip Algonquin Park.

"Today is your day," Jennifer Reynolds, Ontario past-president of the Program told all the recipients at the ceremony. "Enjoy this special moment in your life."

Jim Kershaw, national president of the Program, observed that more than eight million young Canadians have taken part in the award program since it started here in 1963.

"We're very proud of the program in Canada," he remarked.

"You are individuals who can set goals and achieve them," he told the recipients, "and I can tell you, you are in very short supply."

"This is a gem to put on a resume, " he added, commenting that he sees hundreds of resumes and knows that being able to cite involvement in the program sets those people apart from others.

"All of you here inspire hope," Johnson told them. "You're already having an impact on your community."

"We have a lot to learn from you," he added.

COMPETING AT CNE

Sunday saw the annual Ambassador of the Fairs competition at the Canadian National Exhibition in Toronto. Representatives from 63 agricultural societies from throughout Ontario were on hand competing for the title. Patrick Forster was representing the Caledon Agricultural Society and Jeanette Burnside was there on behalf of the Albion and Bolton Agricultural Society. The competition was won by Jodie Hooker, from Dundalk and District Agricultural Society.

That's the way democracy works

NATIONAL AFFAIRS
Claire Hoy

Here's a question:

Suppose you wanted to join a particular club but you didn't like the rules of entry? Would you just not join? Would you join and then try to change the rules once you were a member?

Or would you — as three disgruntled Canadian residents did lately — run off to court and attempt to get them to change the rules to satisfy your own bias?

We speak, of course, of last week's welcome decision by the Ontario Court of Appeal — although one wonders how the matter even got that far in the first place — shooting down the efforts of three people to change the requirement to swear an oath to the Queen before becoming a Canadian citizen.

One of them, a former Toronto Star journalist Michael McAteer, 80, an Ireland-raised republican who sees the monarchy as an "anachronism," has lived here since 1964.

McAteer claims: "It's an insult on my integrity to take an oath that I don't believe a word of..."

Perhaps nobody told McAteer that Canada is a constitutional monarchy and the Queen is head of state. He obviously doesn't like it but it's surely beyond simple arrogance to demand we refashion our system just to fit his own personal republican biases.

Then there's Simone Topey, a Rastafarian, who says swearing the oath would "deeply violate her religious belief." She sees Queen Elizabeth as the "Queen of Babylon," a scurrilous assertion that is surely an affront to the vast majority of Canadians who, whether monarchists or not, who share the widespread respect the Queen deserves.

And finally there's Dror Bar-Natan, an Israeli immigrant. To him the oath is "repulsive." Why? Because he says the Queen is a symbol of inequality. Really? If only she were as perfect as he is then apparently all would be well with the world.

In any event, the court found that these three complainers totally misunderstand the nature and legality of the supposedly offensive oath.

Imagine having to be told that simply swearing an oath to the Queen doesn't mark you as an ardent monarchist. What it means, as the Globe and Mail editorial aptly put it, is "that you recognize and accept Canada's system of democratic, rights-based government, which the Crown symbolizes. That constitutional system includes the absolute right to advocate and work for the rewriting of the oath — and even to bring about the end of the monarchy itself."

"When new citizens swear an oath to the Queen, they are not promising to personally serve an 88-year-old woman who lives in Buckingham Palace."

Rather, as Justice Karen Weiler put it, "the oath to the Queen of Canada is an oath to our form of government, as symbolized by the Queen as the apex of our Canadian parliamentary system of constitutional monarchy."

When you get charged with a crime and appear in court, for example, the state is represented in court by the "crown." That doesn't mean Queen Elizabeth is about to trot into the court to prosecute the accused. But it does mean the prosecution is acting on behalf of the "crown," i.e. the Canadian state.

The actual oath for new citizens — apparently so horrific to our three malcontents — reads: "I swear (or affirm) that I will be faithful and bear true allegiance to Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth II, Queen of Canada, Her Heirs and Successors, and that I will faithfully observe the laws of Canada and fulfil my duties as a Canadian citizen."

That's it. Hardly an assault on anybody's personal comfort or well-being, but currently a legal part of the constitution.

You don't get to pick and chose which parts of the constitution you will follow and which parts you will ignore, at least not without some consequences.

On the other hand, if there are parts of the constitution — or any other law on the books — that you don't like for whatever reason, as a Canadian citizen you are absolutely free to pursue any legal avenue you wish to bring about the change you want.

When the Quebec separatist Bloc Quebecois MPs were Her Majesty's Loyal Opposition in the Commons from 1993 to 1997 you can be sure none of them were monarchists and all would cheer if the Queen were excised from the constitution.

But, respecting Canadian law as it is — as opposed to what they would wish it to be — they all dutifully swore an oath to the Queen in order to take their seats in the Commons.

That's the way democracy works. And thank heavens for it.

Caledon has a bronze

Local archers compete at Ontario Summer Games

This year, the Ontario Summer Games (OSG) were held in Windsor from Aug. 7 to 10. Caledon sent two archers to the Games

Hayley Maskell and Lyla Stevens Woo

Hayley Maskell takes aim.

— Hayley Maskell, 15, and Lyla Stevens Woo, 16, and Maskell came home with a bronze medal.

The girls were members of the Central Zone Archery Team, which was comprised of both male and female athletes ranging in age from 14 to 20. The team included both recurve and compound archers. The Central Zone encompasses several regions such as Simcoe, Dufferin, Peel, Toronto, Niagara and Waterloo.

The tournament format for the Summer Games was a two-day competition, shooting 90 arrows each day over three distances — 55, 45 and 35 metres. At the end of the second day, Maskell won the bronze medal, just three points behind the silver medalist. Woo battled fierce competition and extreme heat to score a personal best both days of the competition. She intends to continuing her training and to attend the next Summer Games in 2016 as a medal contender.

The Central Zone Team as a whole won seven medals: four gold, one silver and two bronze.

Maskell first became interested in archery after trying it at summer camp. She took lessons at the Archers of Caledon club and then began training with Coach Richard Towler who was Team Canada's manager and assistant coach for the London Olympics in 2012. She began competing in 2013 in both indoor and outdoor tournaments at the local, provincial, national and international levels.

She won her first gold medal while in Grade 8 at the St. Michael's Father Mulcahy Memorial Tournament, beating her closest competitor by 200 points. Over the next five tournaments she competed in, she won a gold, silver and bronze medal and placed fourth twice. This past indoor season, Maskell competed in the Canada Winter Games Trials, finishing fourth, and she won a silver medal as a member of a senior women's team at the Multi-Site Indoor Championships of the Americas.

Maskell also competed as a member of the Humberview Secondary School archery team and won the silver medal at ROPSSAA and the sixth place medal at the Ontario High School Archery Invitational Tournament. She was chosen as the team MVP.

Woo has been interested in archery since she was very little and began shooting about a year and a half ago at the Archers of Caledon. She took the beginner classes and then met Maskell through the Humberview archery team. They often train together at school and their club. The practice paid off as Woo placed seventh at ROPSSAA and 20th at the Ontario High School tournament. This summer, she began shooting outdoors and competing at outdoor tournaments.

The Central Zone Team would like to thank the Ontario Archery Association for their support and coordination, as well as their sponsors, including the Ontario Centre for Classical Sports (Mississauga), Warthog Archery Targets (Orangeville), Dufferin Northern Peel Anglers' and Hunters' Association (Orangeville), Digital Vision Security (Orangeville), Embroid Me Brampton, CALSARCH Archery (Caledon) and the Archers of Caledon.

These games brought together more than 2,500 athletes who competed in 20 sports at multiple venues as well as hundreds of coaches, managers, and officials who were supported by over a thousand volunteers.

OSG began in 1970 as a showcase for amateur sport. The Games have now become Ontario's largest multi-sport event, including both team and individual sports, and they are a stepping stone for these young athletes to many national and international competitions.

Bruce Trail Conservancy's conservation work celebrated by Ontario Nature

Bruce Trail Conservancy (BTC) has received Ontario Nature's Steve Hounsell Greenway Award.

In the presence of noted naturalists from around the province, BTC Executive Director Beth Gilhespy was delighted to receive the award June 21 on behalf of the organization.

In Ontario's increasingly urbanized landscape, BTC is working to ensure critical Niagara Escarpment landscape remains in its natural state for everyone to explore and enjoy in perpetuity. BTC is one of Ontario's largest land trusts, and its work in conserving and preserving Escarpment land is of growing importance.

The Ontario Nature award celebrates individuals or organizations who are working to provide vital links between green spaces.

"The Bruce Trail Conservancy's work as one of Ontario's largest land trusts, preserving over 8,000 acres of Niagara Escarpment landscape, demonstrates that the organization is very deserving of this award," Ontario Nature President Angela Martin wrote.

Gilhespy reflected on the meaning of this award.

"So often we're recognized, and rightly so, for our world-class Bruce Trail, which is well-loved by hundreds of thousands in Ontario and worldwide who hike the Trail. But it's incredibly gratifying to be recognized by our peers for the challenging work we do in preserving and conserving the natural habitat along the Niagara Escarpment," she said. "It is truly an honour to receive a conservation award from a highly respected and dedicated organization such as Ontario Nature."

Brewers fall behind Ivy Leafs early in second round of NDBL playoffs

By Jake Courtepatte

The Bolton Brewer were handed their first taste of defeat Sunday, falling to the third-place Ivy Leafs in the first game of the North Dufferin Baseball League playoffs second round.

With the Brewers up 2-1 in the bottom of the sixth, Leaf Todd Gowan hit a solo shot to tie the game. Gowan led the Leafs in home runs in the regular season with nine.

Then with two outs and nobody on base, an error put the go-ahead run on first.

"Unfortunately, it seems to be a rule of thumb in baseball," said Brewers' coach Mike Wallace. "You make a two-out error, and they always seem to come back and bite you."

Starting pitcher Zack Riddell hit the next batter, then gave up a double to bring in both runners.

After a scoreless seventh inning for the Brewers, the Leafs would take the game 4-2.

Despite the sixth inning fallout, Riddell threw a solid, complete game, giving up five hits and four runs.

The Brewers swept the Clearview Orioles in three games in the first round, giving them a week's rest before taking on the Leafs.

Despite Sunday's loss, Wallace believes that the team benefited from the extra time off.

"It was probably beneficial for us health-wise," he said. "A couple guys were a little dinged up. So it was nice to get some time off and get them healthy. Hopefully with these next couple days we can recover even more — we've been battling the injury bug all year."

The second-place Brewers opened their sweep against Clearview at home. Pitcher Mike Blackwood took the mound, setting the pace early by striking out the first three batters he faced.

In the top of the second, he would make his only mistake of the game, allowing a double to centre, bringing in the first run to make it 1-0 for Clearview. However, two batters later he would pick up his fourth 'K' of the game to strand two runners in scoring position. Blackwood would finish with eight strikeouts on the night.

The Brewer bats would open up in the third inning, taking the lead 2-1 off three hits and a walk.

Neither team could muster up much of fence after that, with Bolton taking the first game of the series 2-1.

The series then moved to Clearview, where the second game saw plenty of offensive production. The two teams would combine for 22 runs, with the Brewers taking a stranglehold on the series in a 13-9 win.

The third outing of the series was back in Bolton, giving the Brewers the opportunity to take the series on home field. Similar to the first match, it was a defensive and pitching battle that resulted in a Brewer 4-2 win.

Andrew White pitched five and two-third innings for the Brewers, allowing two earned runs.

Despite the two-run win, coach Wallace said the game was closer than the score indicated.

"They seemed to kind of nip-and-tuck us a little bit," he said. "They would consistently get the first two guys on, but luckily Andrew would kind of battle and hold down the fort."

Ivy's route to the second round proved to be slightly more difficult, tying their first game with the Mansfield Cubs before winning three in a row to finish the series last Wednesday.

Moving on, Wallace said he believes the team needs to get their bats back in check in order to take control of the series.

"We had our chances in that game, we just couldn't get the hits we needed to," he said. "The bats need to come alive. That will be the big thing for us, we've got to start hitting the ball again."

The teams split the season series, each winning one game at home.

Game two in the Ivy series goes tonight (Thursday) in Bolton, with Mike Blackwood taking the mound for the Brewers. For full playoff schedules and stats, visit www.ndbl.ca
